Abstract:	Records pertaining to the architectural firm, Wareham DeLair, which was based in Saranac Lake, NY. The firm worked on many building projects throughout the Adirondack Park in the 20 th century.

Historical Note

The firm of Wareham DeLair was originally founded in 1897 by William Coulter in Saranac Lake, NY. Coulter came to the Adirondacks at a time when large private camps were being established by the wealthy throughout the park. Coulter designed many of these camps and the firm became the leading designer of Adirondack rustic camp architecture. Coulter was later joined in practice by Max Westhoff, and the firm became Coulter & Westhoff. After Coulter died in 1907, Westhoff practiced solo until William Distin became his partner shortly before World War I. After the war, the firm continued under Distin's name for many years until Arthur Wareham joined him in 1950. The firm then became Distin & Wareham until Distin's death in 1970. Around this time Ronald DeLair joined as partner, bringing the firm to its final name, Wareham DeLair. Eventually Wareham retired, and DeLair was the principal architect until the firm ended in 2011. Although the firm was famous for its Adirondack rustic buildings, it was also a general architectural practice. They designed projects ranging from churches to ordinary commercial and government buildings. The firm also worked on project proposals for the Adirondack Museum (now Experience) when it was being built.

Series 6 – Architectural Drawings: William L. Coulter through Distin and Wareham

Location: Library Map Drawers

Arrangement note: The series has been arranged alphabetically using original titles supplied by the firm. The sub-series were created in response to the various sized documents in the collection and have been organized alphabetically by customer name, or when not present, by the main identifying information. The small scale drawings were removed by the archivist and organized alphabetically under Sub-series: Small Scale Drawings in an effort to better preserve the documents. Sub-series: Rolled drawings contain the bulk of the earliest architectural drawings, ranging from the early 1900s to the early 1980s. These drawings have been organized alphabetically for ease of use. Because of the nature of the media, some related drawings can be found in various parts of the collection. This is a result of the organizational scheme as imposed by Wareham DeLair Architects, i.e. Trudeau related architectural drawings can be found in both Series 6 and Series 7.
