College Language Instructor Relates Impressions of Europe to City Club

Professor A. L. DeLozier, Language instructor of Ashland College related his impressions of Europe in an interesting talk to the Lions club Monday noon at Hetler's.

The difference in customs of Americans and Europeans was the basis of the professor's talk. He declared that the caste system and class spirit was still dominant in the European nations.

In speaking of the differences in European cities and in our own, Professor DeLozier declared that French automobiles used the old fashioned horn. "Most of the horses wear bells and the cracking of the whip keeps many American tourists awake at nights," he declared.

Question: What are We?

—T—

The No-No Boys, Hank and Ray, are with us again after a torrid ten-day trip with the Glee Club.

Anyone thinking that Ken-ny Stouffer and J. Ward Pfeiffer are in their training regulations should see them doing road work in the evenings on the Mansfield highway.

"Stockings are coming down," says an article in a trade paper. We had observed it, in some cases, but we would not be so impolite as to call attention to it.
