A couple of weeks ago the Editor discovered a real nice Ever-sharp pencil. As he does not wish to have his conscience further cluttered up he wishes that the owner would approach within hailing distance of his person and proceed to present claim for said article.

PRESIDENT JACOBS DISCUSSES AMERICA AND WORLD AT Y. M.

Dr. Jacobs spoke last Tuesday night, December 6th, at the Y. M. C. A. meeting on the subject of "America's Gift to the World." The subject was of great interest to all and Dr. Jacobs convinced his eager listeners that America has made many gifts to the world and has many more to offer.

Some have said that the greatest gifts to the world have been Jesus Christ and the discovery of America. These were gifts from God. People at one time believed, and some do yet today, that money, wealth, was the real joy of life. Most people now realize that there is something greater than riches and that thing is perfect idealism. Idealism comes first and then wealth.

Dr. Teeter Flays Equalists

In an economic sermon on the defense of wealth, Dr. R. R. Teeter defended the present order of inequality of distribution of wealth. He went deep into history to show how the capitalist of today is justified in his stand because of inequality of ability.

He briefly outlined the reasons for such a sermon and proceeded immediately into the sermon proper. He showed how, even though it is misused, wealth is the very foundation of all progress. "We should not condemn a thing because it is misused," he argued. He then proceeded to give a brief history of wealth from the primitive man to the present order.

Dr. Teeter next attempted to define wealth by quoting various authors. "The course of all wealth is the soil of the earth but inaccessibility often causes a

SONNET

I often wonder, when with microscope
 I chase a protomyxa 'cross the slide
 Or watch a paramoecium roll and glide
 Thru habitats of dark green oozy dope
 If once I, too, in similar bilge did grope—
 A brother protameba by my side;
 Could I from such a minute cell have hied
 Myself so far up Evolution's Rope?

But when I think of you, dear, I agree
 With that wise savant, William Jennings
 Bryan—

Such theorizing simply could not be
 And all the evolutionists are lyin';
 I'm sure, when I look in your wondrous eyes

You've evolved straight from Paradise.

A BI-FORTNIGHTLY JOOURNAL

We have, for some time, been negotiating for the serial rights of what we consider to be the "Great American Novel," but a fellow-columnist has beaten us to it, and has begun to advertise it already. Naturally, as we like to be entirely original, and as we dislike doing anything that anyone else does, we have been put to the necessity of casting about for something else. No sooner than we had begun to do this when we happened to observe what a fine thing it would be if we had some really reliable guide to steer us on such a quest, to convoy us safely over the perilous seas of worthless reading matter and to guide us, as it were, to the solid shore that is literature. Instantly there arose a great idea. "The Outline of History" is with us, and "The Outline of Science." The Outline of Literature, why not?

We therefore take great pleasure in announcing the fact that the aforesaid Outline will appear serially in this space just as fast as the work progresses. Also, the first installment is liable to appear any time. Subscribe now and watch for it.
