VERSI AMATORIS

Despite this world of pleasurable things
Round which our lives career;
However much we do enjoy

This mundane sphere:

It much is vacant after all
And all its pleasures pall.
Save one, and one alone, my dear,
And that is knowing you.
I speak the truth, my love, I swear
That long hence, but for you
The sod would rest my weary head
And I'd be singing psalms.
But yet you seem to be perverse
And all my love-songs spurn,
Nevertheless I love you still
I give you one more chance
O, tell me that you love me, do—
My Movie Queen! My Movie Queen!

—PHILIP SPACE.

"Marie certainly has a large vocabulary."

"Yes, I've told her she should take more exercise."

Room: "Say, can I borrow your hat again?"

Mate: "Sure, why the formality?"

SEMESTER GRADES GIVEN OUT

Grades for the first semester have been parcelled out in record time this year. Complete statements were given out to each student on last Thursday.

Lord Bacon, say the English profn
Wrote words that dripped with knowledge
While Charlie Lamb wrote simple stuff
For students in the college,
But still, although I may be dumb
(A point beside the question)
I can't stand Lamb or Bacon, for
They upset my digestion!

—'TWERE FOLLY TO BE WISE

Inspiring Address By Mrs. Martin Shively

"A Mother's Duty to Her Children—Subject

"A Mother's Duty to Her Children" was the topic for discussion at the Y. W. C. A. meeting held in the Philomathean Hall, Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Martin Shively read a very interesting paper upon this subject, wherein she pointed out that Wifehood and Motherhood were God-given. She said, "Nothing is more wonderful than life, and nothing is more beautiful than a beautiful life. This is possible to every girl." By reference to the Scripture she showed that it was not an accident that Mary was the mother of Jesus. She had lived a clean, pure life. "So every girl should strive to have bodily cleanliness and high ideals," she said. Mrs. Shively repeated the tribute that Abraham Lincoln paid his mother when he said, "All that I am or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother." This is one of the rewards of Motherhood. She closed by saying, "Right living and obedience must be first established in the home and then it will reign in our country."

The devotionals were led by Miss Priscilla Zimmerman, after which Miss Gaynell Heppard rendered a piano solo. There will be an election of officers at next meeting.

THE LAW OF FORCE

Ain't it funny
When you go
Out with a
First class girl
And you sit
On a park
Bench and for
The first few
Minutes you say
Nothing but just Gaze at the Stars and then
Isn't it funny
That one end
Of the bench
Seems to be
About ten feet
Higher than the
Other end and
Then you say
Still less ! ! !

VALUE OF LOVING WORK--- H. H. WOLFORD IN CHAPEL

"The man who has a real love for his work will be possessed with the true Christian Spirit," Prof. Wolford said in chapel Thursday. He went on to show the characteristics of the man who loves his work. He said that if we did not love our work, we should find some job that we can love and put our whole soul into the work. He said that love of work will do three things, viz., (1) The thing we love will rule our life, (2) Impress our mind and (3) Give us strength. He read a short poem to impress his point in closing.

SERMON BY REV. BAER

Duty of Sonship

The duty of sonship makes for obedience unto fathers. "Children obey your parents for this is good! . . . He who obeys a godly father obeys the voice of God." True obedience is founded on reverence. The seed of Bolshevism is sown in the disregard for conduct and law of the father.

A further obligation of sonship is to "honor thy father and mother" for this is the first commandment with promise. "No man should ever get beyond the place where he is not to show reverence and honor for his father and mother."

STILL OWING

One day Jake was making his first date and she was rich and Jake knew it. So they got started talking about their families and his sweetheart said:

"When my father was a boy he sold papers on the street and today he's a millionaire."

Jake smiled and said: "When my father was a boy he sold soap—and guess what he's worth today?"

The girl said, "Oh, about a million dollars."

Jake said, "Not a cent; he still owes for the soap."

"He calls her 'Revenge' and she calls him 'Vengeance.'"

"Why?"

"Revenge is sweet and vengeance is mine."
