

Vowed to win her or to die.

Pheelix phairly phell phor Phlorence—
Pheared to leave her out oph sight;
When she saw another phellow
Pheelix nearly died oph phright.

Pheelix wooed this phairest maiden;
Thought that he was quite "Ka-tish";
Wanted Phlorence to accept him
Though she thought he was a phish:

So he told the phair one sophtly
That phor her his heart did beat;
Phlorence phlew and called the phoot-man—
Pheelix landed in the street.

Phor ten days he phelt quite phrightphul;
With a brick his head he'd rock;
So to end the phearphul sorrow
Pheelix wandered oph the dock.

MORAL

Iph you phind you phall phor phemales;
Phlee bephore you phall too phar;
Never try to phuss a phemale,— Phor you know what phemales are.

everybody else)

Before

The same old sprint in the morning, boys,
To the same old Prof and class;
Chained all day to the same old book;
In love with a pretty lass;
Writing the same mean old notes,
Trying to get a date—
Oh, tickled stiff will I be to know
That I am to graduate.

After

The same old rush in the morning, boys,
To the same old boss and job,
Chained all day to the same old desk
In the office mob,
Writing the same mean old checks,
The rich to emulate—
Oh, why did I ever, ever wish
That I would graduate!

After introducing an acquaintance to his would-be spouse, he expressed his pride in this fashion: "I'm a mighty lucky guy to get that girl. She's the most easily pleased girl in the world."

The acquaintance, knowing him, agreed.
