

Passion Play Lecture Profoundly Stirs Students

Dr. Akers Tells of His Experiences Abroad

Rev. Akers described very beautifully his trip through Europe and the Passion Play at a joint meeting of the Y. W. and Y. M. C. A.'s Tuesday night. There were about one hundred in attendance at this unusual service.

A description of the trip through Europe was first given. He met with a party of Americans in Amsterdam and traveled with them through several countries. The larger cities of Germany are noted for their beauty. The city of Cologne has the greatest cathedral of all Europe. It is mammoth in size. Some of the greatest paintings are found on the walls of this cathedral. The most perfect architecture in the world is found here. There can be twenty-four thousand worshipers in this building at one time. It took six hundred years to build it.

The trip down the Rhine was very enjoyable. On either side are large steep banks. Upon these are castles of the old Lords. Farther down the river is the level land and the terraces. These terraces are covered with vineyards.

The party finally arrived at the city of the Passion Play, Oberammergau. The city is situated in a valley overshadowed by high mountains. There are about eighteen

BEAR CATS WIN 30-7 FROM LOUDONVILLE

Gongwer Men Show Good Form and Real Fight

The College Second team won the game with Loudonville High School last Friday by a score of 30 to 7. The game was hard fought and the Loudonville warriors never quit fighting throughout the whole contest. The game was loosely played and was replete with fumbles by both teams. The Second team outweighed the Gongwer men by about ten or fifteen pounds per man.

That the Loudonville aggregation had the fight is shown by the fact that in the fourth quarter when the score stood 24 to 0 against them they advanced the ball steadily up the field and earned a touchdown despite the desperate resistance of the Bear Cats.

The Ashland scores came largely as a result of the loose defense of the visitors. "Sid" Hatfield scored the first touchdown when he caught a punt on Ashland's forty yard line and ambled sixty yards for a counter. The next score came when Rupert intercepted a forward pass and made a touchdown after a fifty yard run. Ashland scored again in the second quarter when they advanced the ball steadily to Loudonville's five yard line where Webster took it across in two plays.

Loudonville buckled down to real playing here and a pass from Swank to Kaylor took the ball into Ashland territory. The fast backs of the Loudonville machine plunged the line and carried the ball to Ashland's fifteen yard line. Carey ran left end and scored. Ashland scored again in the last quarter when a pass from McClintock to Hastings went for a touchdown.

In this game Coach Murray had a good chance to test his second string men and get an idea of what they would do under fire. Hatfield proved to be a flash in broken field running and Rupert played up to form. Smith and Hastings, two second year men, proved to be capable ends. Lowe made a good impression on the line and Hunter held down left tackle satisfactorily.

The most outstanding player on the Loudonville aggregation was Bernhard, the quarterback. The way he managed his team and judged his plays would have done credit to many a quarter on a team representing a much larger school. Kaylor is probably the fastest man on the visiting team. At one time he ran back a punt for forty yards and nearly broke through the Ashland defense. Carey also showed good running form in the back-field.

This encounter was of especial interest because of the fact that the visitors are coached by J. H. Gongwer, a graduate of Ashland. Mr. Gongwer began football at Loudonville when he started teaching there three years ago and has developed his team with nothing to start with. Lineup and summary:

Garber Speaks on The Worthwhile Life

Dr. L. L. Garber, head of the department of English, gave an interesting and helpful talk in Chapel Wednesday morning, on the "Worthwhile Life." He imagined that his talk was a discarded article which he had found while rummaging through the waste paper basket of the "Collegian" editor. The title of this supposed editorial was "The Worthwhile Life."

The article concerned itself mostly with designating the difference between the worthwhile and the worthless lives. The first part of the discourse was given over to enumerating the characteristics of the worthless man. "None but the useful life is any life at all," he said in passing. His next point was that the worthless man is not worth while. "The Worthless man is a dead man," he asserted.

Next, he classified the worthless man as to the characteristics which brand him as a worthless man. The first worthless man, he said was the man who was given over to pleasure. He went on to say that the second class was the man who spent all of his time in dressing. "The man without any business is the third class," he said. He elaborated beautifully upon these classes giving the details of each class as he went. At the close of the talk, he spent a small amount of time in admonishing the students to shun these characteristics and to seek a higher ideal in life.
