INDEX # 4 (Exposures 327- 423)
1743/1744 – 1746 J1 31

Introduction

This is an index of the custom records kept by British custom officials in colonial Portsmouth, New Hampshire between 1694 and 1775. Inbound and outbound vessels are recorded, along with their owners, masters, where and when built, cargos and destinations or port from which they arrived. The index is somewhat imperfect, with gaps and overlaps in dates.

Periodically the records were shipped to London, where they were inspected and stored. The Portsmouth Athenaeum acquired these records on microfilm from the Public Record Office in London in 1996. The microfilm was disorganized and difficult to access. Some of it was too faint to read easily. Therefore, it was not a usable research tool. Between 2011 and 2013 two volunteers undertook the project of organizing and indexing the records in order to make this important primary material available to researchers. First, Steven Hemeon scanned each page and organized it to prepare it for indexing. Then John Knowlton managed the monumental task of indexing the information.

There are several details that the researcher must understand in working with these indexes. Modern technology in a sense has conquered spelling issues along with multiplicity of names and locations through manifold listings. Thus information can be accessed by vessel, by date, by owner(s), by master's name, when and where the vessel was built, and its destination or last port. The index also gives the exposure(s). Exposure numbers are given because in some cases several exposures were required to capture all the information. Original page numbers appear on the exposures. A particular vessel's cargo may be found by volume number on the exposure sheets kept in the Athenaeum vault.

The Portsmouth Athenaeum extends its thanks to Steve Hemeon and John Knowlton for their careful and painstaking work on this project. They have made a vital contribution to understanding commerce in the Piscataqua region prior to the American Revolution.
