A VISIT TO THE LOWRY FARM PROVES QUITE INTERESTING

A visit to the T. W. Lowry Farm will show a farmer who is keeping pace with the trend of modern methods.

The tract of land consists of 320 acres, near town, and most of it level land. Mr. Lowry has 160 in cultivation, two good pastures, one of which he uses and one which he has leased for a dairy pasture. He will have 160 acres in cotton this year, and 20 acres in corn and oats. The entire place shows that it is being well managed and that Mr. Lowry is making farming a business. He tells us that he plans to make his place one of the best farms and the most modern in this section.

When asked about the use of the tractor in farming, we learned that he has recently purchased one from the Hinton and Hutton Company, and that he is very enthusiastic concerning its value. One man on the farm broke 17 acres while two men in the same length of time with 4 mules broke 4 1/2 acres. We could readily understand his enthusiasm when such facts were put before us. The tractor will also be extensively used in cultivating later.

In addition to running the farm, with his two sons, Mr. Lowry also conducts a store on the place and still has time for lot of other jobs about his attractive place. Of course he was busy when we called to see him but persuaded him to stop for a chat.

His is one of the many farms that are being made to pay in this section and Mr. Lowry is to be congratulated on his good work.

TO HAVE SPECIAL DEMONSTRATION SATURDAY

W. H. Beatty, of Swift & Company, will be at the Chas. Dean & Son store all day Saturday, demonstrating Swift's Premium Hams, which will be sold at a very special price on this date.

The Dean Market has been in operation for only a bit over a year but has already gained an enviable reputation throughout this section for high quality meats and service.

SEEING COLLIERVILLE FROM THE SKIES

Earl Thomas, Transport Pilot, brought a cabin plane out from Memphis last Sunday afternoon, landed at the Mann Airport and proceeded to carry up passengers during the afternoon. Each ride lasted about ten minutes and afforded quite a thrill as well as an aerial view of our pretty little town. Quite a number of local people took advantage of the opportunity to fly and came down all enthusiastic about the trip.

BAPTIST CHURCH ITEMS

The Lord's Supper Next Sunday, April 20th, is the regular Communion Day. Every member is urged to be present. The offering for Missions in March was: Sunday School $29.75 Church 22.35 W. M. S., Circle No. 1 19.00 Circle No. 2 19.65 Total $90.75

"J. S." STEAMER DE LUXE TO MAKE LAST VOYAGE SUNDAY

The palatial Steamer, "J. S." will make its last appearance in Memphis this Spring, Sunday, April 20th, making an afternoon excursion at 3:00 P. M. and returning at 5:39 P. M. and a moonlight excursion from 8:30 to 11:30 P. M. This will be last appearance of this steamer this Spring, for her schedule will not permit her to return again, so anyone who misses seeing this steamer that gives ocean service on the Mississippi River, with its steamer chairs, wicker furniture, and other appropriate and lovely decorations will surely miss something.

In the Venetian Ball room, the famous Cotton Pickers Orchestra, which made such a hit last Sunday will again play aboard the Steamer, and render a new musical program, displaying their talent more than ever.

JOIN THE CIVIC CLUB

COLLIERVILLE CIVIC CLUB ORGANIZED

At a meeting held in the school auditorium Wednesday night, a preliminary organization of the Civic Club was made. The meeting was called to order by Harry Williamson after which, Floyd Looney, a student Millsaps College, Miss. pronounced the Invocation. Misses Katherine and Loraine Burchett gave a piano duet; Copeland Williams, humorous reading and Miss Katherine Mal Dean two lovely vocal numbers.

Col. Wm. Bacon made a splendid talk on civic work, stressing the need of a Civic Club in Collierville at this time. Following Col. Bacon, Mr. Tuggles of the County Health Department, spoke of the screening campaign now under way.

Mark Kirk was elected chairman, and Mr. J. H. Morris, Secretary. A committee composed of Mrs. W. N. Craig, Watson Kelsey and Walter Harris was appointed to work in the interest of the Clean-up Campaign. A standing committee, composed of Mayor J. T. Patrick, J. F. Dudley, Watson Kelsey, Harry Williamson and Mrs. Chas. Dean, was appointed to assist Mr. Kirk in the final organization.

Get in line, Join the Civic Club, and let's all work together that WE may make Collierville the best place in Tennessee in which to live.

SPECIAL EASTER SERVICE

The Christian Church will have a Song and Præse Service at 11:00 A. M. Easter Sunday. Special Easter music is being prepared.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR BANQUET

The Memphis C. E. Union Banquet was held at the Gayoso Hotel last Monday night. Each Society had a separate table. The place cards were very attractive with C. E. monogram and the name of the Society. Collierville C. E. had nine at their table, a larger representation than some of the Memphis churches.

The larger tables were decorated with baskets of purple Iris and candles tied with tulle.

The C. E. orchestra furnished music during the first part of the evening. Later a male quartette, with Mrs. Shields at the piano, sang several numbers. Each Society, then, had a stunt, yell, or song. These added much merriment to the program. Needless to say, we had plenty to eat.

A very impressive talk was made by Dr. Johnson of the Westminster Presbyterian Church. The main idea was not to brag about the "little" we had done for the Church, but to see how much we could do.

Announcement was made by the President of the Chickasaw District, Mr. Lacy Daniel, of the District Convention at Jackson, April 26-27. A very interesting, as well as profitable program is prepared. One feature of the program is a Fellowship Banquet at the Southern Hotel Saturday night. Collierville is planning to have a number of delegates at the Convention. And remember, Endeavors, those registrations must be in by Sunday night.

FOREST HILL NOTES

Mr. T. N. Wright returned home Wednesday from the Methodist hospital, having been operated on for Appendicitis. We are glad to have him home again.

Mr. and Mrs. Millington, the new Manager of Duntreath Farm, arrived Tuesday. Mr. Millington will take charge immediately.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Olivia Shelton is recovering from a recent serious illness, and we hope she will be all right soon.

Mr. Pratt, Manager of the J. W. Dodge Farm, has been doing quite a deal of terracing lately.

The Forest Hill Civic Club is to be congratulated on the improvement made around our little village. This work is appreciated and should be sponsored by each citizen of our community. With a good crop next year, Forest Hill may incorporate, and consider annexing Collierville.

Work has begun on the Highway and we are looking for a sure enough road in the future.

GARDEN CLUB MEETS

The Garden Club of Forest Hill-Bailey-Germantown held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. H. L. Cloyce, Germantown, Wednesday morning. Mrs. W. P. Mitchell, presided. About 20 members out of the 35 on roll were present.

This Club is giving prizes to the amateur members and to the professional members for best specimen flowers shown. At the meeting of Wednesday, Mrs. Mitchell won first prize among the amateurs and Mrs. Cloyce first for professionals.

Mrs. Cloyce gave two collections of Dahlia bulbs and two of Gladioli to one drawing the lucky numbers. Mrs. Elliot, Mrs. Richmond, Mrs. McKee and Miss Ruth Hungerford were the winners at this meeting.

Following a view of Mrs. Cloyce's interesting greenhouses, refreshments of sandwiches and tea were served.

The Garden Club is working in conjunction with the P. T. A.'s, Co-operative Club and Civic Club, with the object of beautifying Bailey, Forest Hill and Germantown. Many plans have been made and are being carried out that will mean much to these towns along Poplar Pike.

EASTER SUNRISE SERVICE

The Union Sunrise Prayer Meeting will be held Easter Sunday at 6:00 A. M. at the Christian Church.

This is a Union service and all the churches in town will be represented. A very interesting program is being planned, using talent from the different churches.

This service has proven to be one of the most inspirational held during the church year. Come and worship with us at this early morning hour.

MANY ATTEND PASSION PLAY AT MEMPHIS AUDITORIUM

Quite a few Collierville people have attended and thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated the Passion Play that is being given this week at the Municipal Auditorium in Memphis. This play of world renown, is proving more wonderful than expected.

Walter Jenkins of the First Methodist Church, has charge of the choral singers, with George Kester, noted tenor, and Rohloff, assistant and accompanist. A Symphony Orchestra and the new Auditorium organ interpret the score of the play.

Adolf Fassnacht of a long line of the Fassnacht family who more than an hundred years ago assumed the responsibility of the role of The Christ, enacts the part in this production. He is supported by a company of strong actors from Friburg, Baden, Germany. There is a choir of 300 voices, and 750 on the stage in the big out door scenes.

Three more performances will be given—tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night (Saturday night.)

FIRST CLEAN-UP DAY NEXT THURSDAY

A truck furnished by the County will be here all day next Thursday, April 24th, to haul off trash, rubbish, weeds, cans and anything else you may want to throw away. Put it out where the men can easily find it and it will surely be hauled away. CLEAN-UP DAY, THURSDAY, 24th

TELEPHONE COMPANY IMPROVES EQUIPMENT

To meet the increased demand for telephones, and in order to improve the service, the Collierville Telephone Company has received this week a carload of white cedar poles, 20 and 25 feet lengths, and 3,500 feet of large cable. The cable will be used around the business section of town and east on Poplar Pike, doubling the present capacity. Work will begin next week on this needed improvement. The new poles will replace old ones and the new cable will permit an increase in the number of telephones.

The present plant and equipment is above the average for the small town of this size, and Manager Delaney is constantly working to improve the service. The people are quick to cooperate in this work, as was evidenced recently when a request was made for subscribers to call by number instead of name.

MR. E. I. MCKIE

A Western Union message, received Wednesday afternoon from Mrs. E. I. McKie in Arizona, told of the death of Mr. McKie, which occurred Wednesday in Glendale, Arizona.

Mr. and Mrs. McKie moved from here to Arizona on account of Mr. McKie's health. At first his condition improved but for some weeks now he had been growing steadily weaker.

He was born in Thulahoma, Marshall County, Miss., fifty-five years ago. For some time he lived at Mt. Pleasant, where he married Miss Meadows. Later he moved to Collierville on Poplar Pike, where he had a farm and dairy. He was well known all through this section and numbered his friends by his acquaintances.

Mr. McKie is survived by his wife and one sister, Mrs. Friend, of Memphis. Interment was made in Glendale, though further particulars were not available before going to press.

SPECIAL SERVICE TO BE GIVEN AT M. E. CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY

The Methodist Church will observe Easter Sunday with a most appropriate service. At the ten o'clock hour, instead of the regular Sunday School, the Beginners, Primary, Intermediate and Junior Departments will present the Children's Day program. At the eleven o'clock hour, Rev. L. H. Estes, of Memphis, will preach.

Rev. Estes needs no introduction to Collierville people—he is well known here and has many friends who know him as a forceful speaker as well as a friend.

Everyone is cordially invited to hear the Children at the Sunday School hour; Dr. Estes at the eleven o'clock hour and to enjoy the special Easter music that is being arranged.

FACTS and FICTION BEING a little bit about anything "Read not to contradict and confute, nor to find talk and discourse, but to weigh and consider."—Francis Bacon.

Have you read the new moral code for the talkies?

It has just been announced by Will Hayes, the "Czar" of the moving picture world, and has been accepted by practically all the big producers.

These are its tenets:

"That the use of liquor in American life shall be restricted to the actual requirements of characterization or plot.

"Pointed profanity is forbidden.

"Obscenity in word, gesture, reference, song, joke, or by suggestion is forbidden.

"Indecent or undue exposure is forbidden.

"That scenes of passion shall not be introduced when not essential to the plot; sex perversion or any inference of it is forbidden on the screen.

"That the sanctity of the institution of marriage and the home shall be upheld; that adultery shall not be explicitly treated or justified.

"That crimes against the law shall never be presented in such a way as to throw sympathy with the crime as against law or justice.

"That acts of murder or brutality shall be presented only in such a way as will not inspire imitation; that methods of crime shall not be presented in explicit detail on the screen that revenge in modern times shall not be justified as a motive.

"Dances which emphasize indecent movements are to be regarded as obscene; the subject of white slavery shall not be treated on the screen.

"No film or episode may throw ridicule on any religious faith; ministers of religion in their character as ministers of religion should not be used as comic characters or villains.

"The use of the flag shall be consistently respected; the history, institutions, prominent people, and citizenry of the nation shall be represented fairly."

Mr. Coolidge has written a history of the United States in 500 words. We'll bet the average history student in our high schools would recommend this as the text in American History.

Daniel A. Poling, Editor-in Chief of the Christian Herald, in an open letter to the Literary Digest reminds them that they are not sending the Women of America an equal number of the Digest's prohibition votes.

Out of 2,447 votes examined by Mr. Poling, 1,761 were sent to men, and only 686 to women.

Mr. Poling insists that the majority of the women are dry, and that the votes should have been distributed equally between men and women.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties. It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West." Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is initiated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton. W. N. U., MEMPHIS, MO. 16-1930.

Lesson for April 20

JESUS TEACHING FORGIVENESS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:15-35, or Easter Lesson, John 20:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Teaching Forgiveness.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Teaching Forgiveness.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Practice Forgiveness?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Is True Forgiveness?

This lesson touches a most vital subject for our everyday lives. We are always surrounded by wicked men. Ill treatment we shall most surely receive, for all who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution (II Tim. 3:12).

In this lesson we have divine instructions as to our behavior in case of such ill treatment.

I. How to Gain an Erring Brother (vv. 15-20).
A sinning brother is lost. To bring him to a knowledge of his sin and restore him to fellowship in the church is to gain him. One soul is of greater value than the whole world. The method to be used is:

1. Personal (v. 15). Go alone and tell him his fault. Personal effort is most vital in winning an erring brother. It is usually an effective method.
2. The help of a comrade (v. 16). "Take with thee one or two more." The presence of one or two comrades helps in making known his fault.
3. Tell it to the church (v. 17). Sometimes the church can accomplish that which the individual and the comrades fail to do.
4. The binding authority of the church's decision (vv. 18-20).

When the church follows the instruction of the Lord, gathers in the name of Jesus Christ, and is actuated by the Holy Spirit, its decisions are final.

II. Peter's Question (v. 21). This question was probably occasioned by the ill treatment which Peter was then experiencing at the hands of his fellow disciples. Christ's confession of Peter brought him into the limelight. The question of the disciples, "Who is greatest in the kingdom?" shows that there was some jealousy of Peter among the disciples. This envy and jealousy was known to Peter. His patience being thus tested, he came to Jesus with a question regarding forgiveness. From the Lord's teaching as to the efforts to bring about reconciliation in case of offenses between brother and brother, he knew that the spirit of forgiveness would be required. Peter, disposed to be gracious, inquired, "till seven times?" showing his readiness to forgive his brother not three times, but twice three times, and a little over.

III. Jesus's Answer (v. 22). This answer was an astonishing revelation to Peter. Jesus said, not until seven times, but until seventy times seven, showing that willingness to forgive should be practically limitless.

IV. The Two Creditors (vv. 23-35). These two creditors illustrate Christ's principle of forgiveness.

1. The gracious creditor (vv. 23-27). The king in this parable represents God. The servant who is greatly in debt represents the sinner, any sinner, every sinner—you and me. We were hopelessly in debt to God. Ten thousand talents are equal to some twelve millions of dollars. To meet this obligation would be an utter impossibility. This man's plea for time, promising to pay all, resembles man's vain imagining that he can pay his debt to God, that by his future good works he can atone for past sins.

2. The cruel creditor (vv. 28-35). The man who was forgiven so much found a man who owed him a small sum—perhaps seventeen dollars. He shut his ears to this man's entreaty to have patience with him, flew at his throat, and cruelly put him into jail. The great mercy shown the one whose debt had been forgiven did not touch his heart, so he refused to be merciful. Being set free from so great a debt as our sins against God, we should not take up some slight consideration against our brothers, but should make God's act of unlimited forgiveness toward us a standard of unlimited forgiveness toward others.

(1) We, every one, continue to need every day the forgiveness of God. When we pray, "Forgive us our debt as we forgive our debtors," let us be sure that we have put away all thought of sin held against others. No mercy will be shown to those who have not shown mercy.

The New Life
The new life will have the reality of religion that comes through putting belief into action, actualizing goodness and brotherliness and all the noble virtues that enrich and beautify life and make it Christlike.—H. B. Grose.

On a Living Tree
Works have their place; fruit has its place, but it is found at the end of the branches, it grows on a living tree.—Selected.

The Decorator's Letter Box

Expert Advice on Home Decoration

My dear Beth:
Yes, I can preach you a little sermon on floors and what to do with them. But you must remember that, as with all sermons, the person "preached at" is supposed to make the application. You are too independent to just take over without definite thought anything that I say, of that I am certain.

If you decide to carpet your floors you have several choices. I'll tell you about them in a minute, but before I do, like the preacher, I must read the text to you. It is this: floors are the foundation of the room and should be

These are just some suggestions, I'll give you more at another time.
About Draperies.

You certainly hit the tack on the head when you said your draperies were going to offer you a wonderful opportunity to get some color into your rooms. After all, the walls are bound to be more or less neutral. Upholstery fabrics, wall hangings and draperies offer you a big field.

Of course you know that glass curtains are those sheer transparent things which hang close to the window, insuring privacy and giving a soft, mellow tone to the sunshine that the darkest plain surface. I don't mean that it has to be black, or always very dark, but it is supposed to be darker than any other part of the rooms—darker than the walls or ceiling.

Another thing about rugs and carpets that you should remember is that if you have figured draperies and figured upholstery material or figured wall paper you had better have plain rugs. Too many patterns spoil the appearance of a room. It is restful and more pleasing to have one plain surface, either rugs, draperies, walls or upholstery material.

Carpeting the entire floor is the simplest way of finishing it. Then there is no floor staining and polishing to bother about. A room carpeted all over is certainly rich and luxurious looking. You know how nice it is to walk on. If the room is very large the all-over carpet helps to pull it together and creates that cozy appearance everyone likes to see in a living room.

If the room is large, and if the walls and draperies permit, a carpet of fairly large and somewhat pronounced pattern may be used. Of course I do not need to warn you against the bright red cabbage roses—that is not what I mean by a large and pronounced pattern. There are a great many at-enters the room, keeping it from being glaring. Naturally they will want to harmonize with the walls and be rather in contrast to the draperies. They will be sheer, unless side drapes are not used. Fringe and trimming should be in keeping with the material of the glass curtain.

Dotted swiss is very good glass curtain material and may be used with cretonnes, chintzes, volles and blocked linen draperies. Voile and swiss are very attractive when made with ruffles. Net, serim and grenadine are other materials well adapted to draperies of the type I mentioned a few lines back. Silk net or gauze, however, are adapted to velour and damask.

Draw curtains are sometimes used with a pulley, rings, etc., to be drawn at night or any other time, when privacy is desired. They are usually made of some fairly heavy material such as cretonne, casement cloth or pongee.

Draperies may be made to harmonize with other appointments in the room without very much trouble. You may have the same material in your upholstery on the chairs and sofa. Rugs also harmonize with the draperies. Draperies, generally speaking, should hang within one inch of the floor. They may be hung from iron tractive patterns in beautiful colors to select from. The gorgeous, splashing reds and yellows went out with Queen Victoria and we hope they are gone forever.

A small pattern is the only one for a small room. This will have the effect of making the room seem larger, while a large pattern would make it seem small.

A plain, neutral tone carpet is always safe and sure to be satisfactory. If you want more color on the floor you can place small rugs on top of the carpet, but don't scatter them—put them exactly where you want them.

rods, wooden poles or from cornices. Valances may be used when there is no reason for wanting to lengthen the window adorned by the draperies.

The color scheme and the material used will depend upon the style of architecture and furniture, the purpose of the room, the proportions, the exposure and the type of windows you have. You see it is almost impossible to say draperies should be so and so. Write me about your windows and I'll try to be more helpful about the decoration of them.

Affectionately,

Moth's Birth Rings Bell

The birth of a royal prince or princess is usually hailed with the pealing of chimes, but in the new Slough Entomological laboratory in London, England, a bell rings every time a moth is born. The entomologists in charge of the laboratory find it necessary to keep accurate records of their study specimens, including the exact time of their birth. To make this possible, they have constructed a device consisting of a small platform suspended from a spring. The pupa from which the moth is to emerge is placed on this platform. When the insect is born, the spring flies up and this action results in the ringing of a bell.—Popular Science Monthly.

Phrase Centuries Old

"Painting the lily," which we understand to refer to a work of supererogation, is not as many of us might be inclined to surmise, the brain child of any of today's authors. Indeed, it has been used for the last few hundred years, with, despite, the havoc that time works with words, the same sense.
Again, it is to our prolific friend, Shakespeare, that we are indebted for the earliest recorded use of this choice lingual titbit, in his King John 4:2.
The phrase was so good that others were quick to follow suit and use it and soon the expression became common currency.—Kansas City Star.

Wife Sore as Hubby Returns 13th Time

Elizabeth, N. J.—It wasn't that her husband deserted her 13 times that annoyed Beatrice Karris so much as the fact that he always came back. The husband, Stanley, she told Police Recorder Brown, came back for the 13th time a couple of days ago and raised a row because she wasn't glad to see him. Stanley was held in $300 bond to keep away from his wife.

GROCER WINS IN DEAL WITH CROOK

Sale of Tea Nets Him Cent and Half Profit.

Kansas City.—"May I have a piece of string to tie my bundle?" "Certainly," William J. Embree, grocer, told the stranger who asked the question.

Work of tying the bundle, which was broken, disclosed a quantity of salt material.

"Present for my brother," explained the man. "Just got here from England, looked for my brother, but he's moved."

"Too bad," sympathized Embree, turning to wait upon another customer who just had entered.

"Ten cents' worth of tea," said this man.

"What have you there?" the customer asked the man who had lost his brother.

The contents of the package, was explained in the broad accent of the Englishman.

The customer inspected the cloth. Wanted to buy it. Offered $130 for it.

"I don't like your nationality," the Englishman told the bargainer. "I can't sell to you."

The customer took Embree aside. "I'm Goldberg," he said. "Country club plaza tailor. You buy this cloth. It's worth $300. I'll go to my shop and get the money. Give you $25 for making the purchase for me."

But Embree had heard Goldberg ask the Englishman, "You're not going to take that back to New York, are you?"

Nothing previously had been said about New York. Embree was suspicious.

"Nothing doing," he told Goldberg. "I think I'll tell the police about this Englishman." He started for the telephone, his visitors for the door.

Goldberg was carrying the tea, the Englishman his bundle.

"Dime for the tea," said Embree, dialing for police headquarters. It was tossed onto the counter.

The men disappeared as Embree made connections with the police.

"It's an old game," he was told. "Couple of confidence men. Cloth was worth probably $40."

"O. K. with me," Embree replied. "I made a cent and a half profit on the tea."

Pumps Three Days as Sharks Circle Craft

Jacksonville, Fla.—Hero of a strange saga of the sea is Jack Grant, a huge negro employed as one of the crew in a motor cruiser owned by Paul Rice of this city. Grant saved his own life and that of Rice after an explosion disabled the craft far from shore and sprang leaks in the seams of its hull.

For three days and nights without a rest Grant pumped and managed to keep the craft afloat until another vessel happened by. Ten minutes after Grant and Rice were rescued their cruiser sank in 200 feet of water.

Grant and Rice were knocked unconscious, but water lapping at his face revived the negro, although Rice was seriously injured.

Time and again, when it seemed impossible for Grant to continue pumping, he would glance over his shoulder and groan:

"Look at dem sharks, boss!"

Then the water would flow more freely from the small pump while the man eaters continued to circle the craft. Grant was on the point of collapse when the other boat finally reached the spot.

Hot Stove Thrower's Wife Is Given Divorce

Chicago.—If you suddenly saw a hot stove come hurtling through the air at you—how would you feel?

Mrs. Ethel Huseby, 2901 McVicker avenue, appeared before Judge Robert Gentzell complaining about her husband, Marshall.

She married Marshall, a chauffeur for her father's coal, wood and ice company, on March, 1926. They lived happily until October 5, 1929, when Marshall developed this stove mania. "And he threw this stove—a hot one—right at my client," recited Attorney Irving Eisenman.

Judge Gentzell pondered. Then—

He granted the divorce and directed Marshall to pay $15 a week alimony for the support of his wife, and a daughter, Ethel, aged three.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

Mary Graham Bonner

SIGHT SEEING

David, who was adventuring through South Africa, made his way south-west.

Rising behind Cape Town he saw the Devil's Peak and the Table Mountain.

He particularly liked the Table Mountain with its long flat top often hidden by its tablecloth of low hanging clouds, and David thought it would be a nice feeling to live where a mountain top was almost always ready for a meal to be put upon its table.

Near the Cape of Good Hope he saw vineyards and was given some delicious jelly.

He saw the snow mountains, too, but after he had wandered about a little he thought he would take a nap. It was fine to adventure but every once in a while one had to take a nap so as to be ready for the next one.

So that was what he decided to do now.

When David awoke in the morning he could hear the Cape of Good Hope, right at the top end of Africa, below Cape Town, singing. He found some breakfast ready for him, a breakfast much as he might have had at home though he thought the fruit unusually delicious.

And then he listened to the song of the Cape of Good Hope:

Storms great, oh, my!
Gales are so high,
Rough seas so mighty,
Oceans so flighty.

I see it all,
Nothing is small,
Around these gay parts
For wild ocean hearts.

Waves so unsteady
I'm quite heady
You never can tell
When I'll roar and yell.

Cape of Good Hope
Never does mope,
The Cape of Good Hope
It never does mope.

It was then that David saw the Cape. He reminded David somewhat of Cape Horn, so wild looking, and boasting to himself, talking against meek low lands.

"Hello, David," he said, finally, "isn't this nice where I am? I go right off here into the Atlantic Ocean."

"How did you get your name?" David asked. "It seems a funny name for so wild a looking creature—and yet maybe it's a good name—I don't know."

"Well, if you don't know, I'll tell you, but I'll tell you the truth. There are some who might tell you incorrectly, when they found out you didn't know anything at all, but not this old Cape."

"They named me this to cheer them up when the storms were bad."

"But I must tell you, too, that in this colony around here there are wonderful ostrich farms. I don't suppose they'd interest you though your mother might be interested—people in your land are supposed to want them more than any others."

And David went to visit the ostrich farms. It was certainly a very fine sight!

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

What an inside-outside age this is, in many ways! Pajamas, which for a dozen or twenty years were supposed to be dedicated to home privacy, now have found a prominent place on beach boulevards. Someone started the fashion of wearing silk hose inside out, declaring that color, sheer quality and even wear were improved by doing that. At any rate, it can make another of life's simple and harmless experiments to have the fun of trying it.

Again this season one can have the pleasure of weighing her hat on a letter scale and finding how little postage it would take, if sent by mail. When the visca straws came in, a few years ago, they began this good habit of hats as light as the feathers of a pigeon. The bewitching hats of taffeta, some with fluted brims, do not have weight, but must be babled just a bit more than the straw hats, from the splash of the rainedrops. Though there was never a genuine summer hat invented, unless made of rubber, which was improved by the baptism of a shower.

It is a big and generous age; bigger and better of nearly everything for women—even shoe-sizes! Though we may not admit it, and the shoemakers with exceeding craft disguise it, the foot of many an American girl is larger than her mother's was, at the same age. Beads are growing larger, there is a vogue for the large party handkerchief, fur collars and scarfs are large and fluffy, and at some types of fashions this summer there will be plenty of wide-brimmed hats.

Printed paper has always held an important part in the world's history since Gutenberg invented movable type. Now it looks as though printed silks are going to hold a high place for years in the history of women's clothes.

Some are always partial to dotted material, and while the polka-dotted gown does not appear to be cast this summer for such an important part in the dress drama as in some recent years, yet it will duly appear on the summer stage. The wee pin-dots, not so frequent of late, are also in the mode for this season.

With a pretty printed silk or two, a wool or wool-and-silk suit, and a dinner dress or two, one could travel across the continent or around the world, with a calm spirit.

The fully tailored suit is one of the aristocrats of the world, so far as women's clothes are concerned. There are suggestions that some of the customs long present in men's wear, such as padded shoulders, may be seen in women's suits and give the essence of correctness. The minute one begins to talk of a "military silhouette," even the placing of buttons on a jacket, the number of buttons, and the grave matter as to whether the coat shall be single or double-breasted, assume importance.

But that swinging pendulum should not be forgotten. If one chooses to be severe and military in suit-time, in hours of ease there is opportunity for floating flounces, dipping sleeve lines—or even for deep fringe. To Dame Fashion fringe always seems the last word in femininity. Men may wear many things affected also by women, but did any man of style ever appear with fringe? So here, at any rate, is one stronghold sacred to women.

Dainty Green Challis, Short Puffed Sleeves

Showing a charming costume for a little miss, it is constructed of green challis, with short puffed sleeves and a double collar. An appropriate little hat, patent-leather shoes and half hose of white complete the outfit.

Print for After Fifty May Be Very Becoming

After one is fifty, says the Woman's Home Companion, a waistline just an inch or so below the normal may be very becoming if it is topped with a slight blousing effect and finished by a yoke belt about five inches wide. This is the way the frock illustrated interprets the Paris mode for the older woman and for good measure of becomingness it adds a surprise jabot. It is a practical dress for the all-day print.

Crepe and Satin Rank High for Sports Wear

The Riviera now is sparkling with white—the white of wool coats, crepe and satin dresses, ermine and fox furs. The sleeveless dress of white flourishes again in sheathing, in marocain, and even in satin.

White crepe satin makes a stunning sports dress, stitched and buckled for an interesting note of fabric contrast. Incrusted bands of self-material zig-zag across the front and back to parallel a slanting inset of box plait on one side of the skirt. There are no sleeves, but the neck is high, round and collared.

In addition to white wool coats there are clever ones of white cloxy or matelasse, which is seen also in colors. In autumn brown, this fabric makes a smart top coat for either a brown crepe dress or the white one. Green will be a predominant spring and summer color if Riviera events cast their shadows before Light greens dot the tennis courts; a cannes, and dark greens, even to the deep bottle shade, are worn on the terraces at Monte Carlo in more formal models.

The bright, short coat of plain wool with the mixture dress of tweed or jersey is important in resort wear, the costume completed by a hat almost certain to match the jacket, usually a beret, small, tight and consummate.

In evening dress the big black bow is anything but inconspicuous, its position varying but its size remaining among the large things of life. Most often it appears centered at the back of the waist, but occasionally it drops down to the back of the knee.

Contrasting with the bouffant evening gown is the straight-line dress, made of such fabric as white georgette with a shirred bodice strapped vertically in self-material, and a long straight hanging full skirt formed of a succession of shaped panels pointed at the hem.

Larger Gloves Are Worn; Milady Prefers Comfort

Glove manufacturers tell us that our hands are growing larger, basing their statement on the fact that while size 6 gloves were formerly in great demand this size is now far less usually required than 6½, and the number of women who unashamedly ask for size 7 is steadily increasing, notes a fashion writer in the Boston Herald.

Undoubtedly hands of American women are increasing in size because it is an uncontroverted fact that the average stature of women is greater in this generation than in the last. If your daughter is an inch or so taller than you are you should not be surprised to learn that she wears gloves a size or so larger.

Probably the most significant factor in this apparent increase in glove sizes is the fact that women no longer wear gloves that are too small. No up-to-date woman has patience to put on gloves that need to be coaxed into position. She wants gloves that can be slipped on in a casual sort of way, and she feels, too, that her hands actually appear smaller and better proportioned if gloves are large enough to be worn easily.

Scrumptious Scarfs

The scarfs which London women wear these days are hand painted in designs of stars and other objects never glimpsed on land, sea or in the sky. But they are beautiful with their striking designs and coloring. Upon one of the fantastic painted figures you are likely to find also painted the initial of the wearer's first name.

ABOUT SOUPS AND THINGS

Beef soup or consommé may be made the base of many interesting dishes such as molded meat, fish or vegetable combinations, when thickened with gelatin. Beef soup treated with gelatin is fine for stuffed vegetables such as tomatoes and green peppers. Oxtail soup makes a fine filling for stuffed cabbage. This soup when served with dumplings is especially well liked. Add a binding of flour and butter.

Try the mulligatawny heated and served with hot boiled rice, garnished with pimentos cut into strips or with chopped green pepper.

With the mock turtle soup add a bit of lemon juice and a dash of Worcestershire or tabasco. Serve with a slice of hard cooked egg, a slice of lemon cut very thin and pour the hot soup over them. Serve at once.

Deviled Crab.—Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and when well blended add one cupful of this cream, one teaspoonful of paprika, a dash of cayenne, two egg yolks, two cupfuls of crab meat, one-half teaspoonful of lemon juice, two-thirds of a cupful of buttered bread crumbs. Mix and cook three minutes, place in a buttered ramekin and cover with buttered crumbs. Place a thin slice of lemon on top of each serving. Bake until brown. Garnish with parsley.

Stuffed Pimentos.—Place canned pimentos in ramekins, open them carefully and stuff with the following: One-half pound of fresh mushrooms or a can will do, cook in butter if fresh, add one-half chopped onion, one and one-half cupful of white sauce, one cupful of fine crumbs, one chopped pimento, one cupful of cooked meat finely chopped, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, salt, paprika and pepper to taste. Cover with buttered crumbs and set in water to bake until brown on top.

CANNED FRUITS LIKED

One may purchase so many of the semi and tropical fruits canned that for occasions they are a great convenience. Figs are not always to be found fresh or dried, but canned they are always available and very easy to serve. In many of the good markets is now a small can selling for ten cents, which makes a delightful dessert or cake filling. When more of the housewives learn the value of figs, this small can will become more popular. Where the fresh fig is obtainable the following confection will be welcome:

Candied Figs.—Wash figs and let stand over night in water to cover. In the morning add to the figs and water a tablespoonful or two of cinnamon candies—enough to color and sweeten the mixture. Cook together until tender. Remove from the heat and cool. Sift each fig and insert three candied cherries. Serve in sherbet glasses with a little of the sirup in which the figs were cooked. Served with whipped cream, it's found most delicious.

Sweet Potato Surprise.—Take two cupfuls of cooked, rice sweet potatoes; when nearly cold add one beaten egg, salt and pepper to taste; if too dry add a little cream. Form into eight balls with a marshmallow hidden in each. Roll in branflakes and fry in hot fat. Drain on soft paper and serve hot.

Peanut Brittle Icing.—Put into a double boiler three tablespoonfuls of water, seven-eighths of a cupful of sugar, one egg white unbeaten, cook and beat for seven minutes. Remove from the heat and cool. Add one pound of peanut brittle to the mixture, stir well and spread on cup cakes or fruit cookies. Put the peanut brittle through a food grinder.

Banana Souffle.—Take one cupful of whipping cream, one cupful of thinly sliced bananas, five eggs, one-half cupful of powdered sugar. Beat the cream until stiff and fold in the sliced bananas, beat the eggs, add sugar and fold in the banana mixture; set in a pan of hot water and bake in small dishes or ramekins until a light delicate brown. Serve at once.

Celeriac Salad.—Take two celery roots, peel, cover with boiling water to which has been added a little lemon juice or vinegar, cook until tender, cut into dice and cool. Add two large peeled apples diced, one grapefruit, cut into bits, one cupful of chopped blanched almonds. Serve with oil and grapefruit juice prepared as a french dressing, adding a bit of lemon juice. Pour over the salad and allow to stand two hours. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Restless Children

Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as its tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

Protection for the Whales
Threatened with extinction through the tremendous expansion of the modern whaling industry, whales have found a friend in the Norwegian parliament. Recent legislation puts restriction on all Norwegian whalers. The practice of paying whaling crews in accordance to the number of whales taken must be discontinued, and all parts of the animals containing oil must be utilized. Illegal catches are subject to confiscation.

Would Cost Millions
Railroad crossings are classified according to the extent and nature of the traffic on both railroads and highways and the cost of elimination estimated. Class A, number, 1,972; cost of elimination, $281,810,000. Class B, number, 2,548; cost of elimination, $166,700,000. Class C, number, 2,984; cost of elimination, $155,325,000.

Says Men Want Pals, Not Patients!

SHE was engaged! She was the happiest girl in the world. A round of teas and parties, a whirl of pleasure, and she began to wonder what was the matter. Too tired to go out—and he—was he becoming tired of her?

It was at this point that Miss Margaret Belden of Los Angeles woke up to the fact that something had to be done about it. "Men want pals, not patients" she writes. "I went right to my doctor. Do you know what he said? Rest—and Nujol!"

"With a prayer in my heart and Nujol in my medicine cabinet I began to fight back to being the healthy, robust, happy girl I had been before. Two months passed. No more tears—no more worrying, no more bad dreams. Today I beat him on the tennis court, and although he can out-swim me, I make him work doing it. It's good to be happy. It's good to be free, physically, and be able to share, any time, in sports or dancing or anything else with the one you love!"

Here's another one who has learned that the simplest and surest way to be well and full of good spirits is to clear the bodily poisons out of your system regularly. Not with powerful drugs, but normally, naturally, easily. Doctors and nurses recommend such a natural treatment as Nujol, because this crystal-clear liquid isn't a medicine at all! It contains absolutely no drugs. It is simply internal lubrication that your body needs like any other machine. Good looks and good spirits—do they spell popularity? You know they do! Get a bottle of Nujol to-night in any drug store. Sold in sealed packages only—trademarked "Nujol." Insist on Nujol by name. It costs but a few cents—and it will make you feel like a million dollars.

Hawaiian Forests

Hawaii is blessed with a considerable quantity of forest land, yet with the exception of one type of wood, koa or Hawaiian mahogany, the forest lands are of little value. The total acreage of woodlands is estimated at 1,000,000 acres, but it is largely in tropical forests with much mesquite. Ohia lehuana, another type of tree, has considerable value as a protection for watersheds.—Washington Star.

Style Has Lasted

In the days when capes were worn instead of coats, men frequently carried swords, hung at the left side, under the cape. The cape was held closed from left to right so that the right hand would be free to reach for the sword when necessary. When coats were substituted and swords were not necessary, the left side was still lapped over the right because men had become accustomed to it.

Doctor's PRESCRIPTION

when system is sluggish; costs nothing to try

When your bowels need help, the mildest thing that will do the work is always the sensible choice. Take a laxative that a family doctor has used for all sorts of cases of constipation. SUCCESSFUL HOMEMAKING
By GRACE VIAL GRAY
EASY TO MAKE COOKIES

No homemaker knows how easy it is to make cookies until she has used self-rising flour. By using this flour, time is saved because the baking powder and salt have already been added to the flour in right proportions which makes for dependability.
The woman who uses self-rising flour for her cookies, pastry, cakes, and biscuits never has to apologize for her products, for they are always of the same excellent quality.
It pays to have one standard cookie recipe which can be varied from one baking time to the next. This makes for ease and quickness in baking. Such a standard cookie recipe is as follows:
Standard Cookie Recipe With Variations.
1/2 cup fat 2 cups self-rising flour
1/2 cup sugar 1/2 cup milk
1 egg 1 1/2 tsp. flavoring
The following flavoring may be used:

Lemon Peel Pecans
Vanilla Walnuts

THE value of eggs, whether for sale on the market or hatching, is greatly influenced by the character of the shell. Eggs with soft, thin, weak shells are a nuisance. They break during the handling or in the shipment, which means the total loss of the broken eggs and injury to many other eggs in the package thru smearing; they have mighty little value for incubation. And flocks which produce eggs having weak shells usually acquire the vice of egg eating.

This trouble is due to (a) lack of shell-forming materials in the rations or (b) inability of the layers to make proper use of the materials. It can usually be corrected in a short time.

IF a laying hen produces 200 firm-shelled eggs during the year she will have use for about three and one-half pounds of lime. This goes into the egg shells. If the lime is not available, the layer will cease production until she can accumulate enough lime to make firm shells or will produce faulty shells or are without shells.

Perhaps the best source of shell-making material is crushed oyster shell which can be secured from the local feed dealer. The cost is low and oyster shell should be kept before the flock continuously. Do not permit it to become coated with dust as this checks consumption. If necessary, wash it so it will be clean and bright.

Most commercial egg mashers contain bone meal and calcium carbonate, but even where these are fed the shell hopper is a necessity in the laying pen.

THE laying hens, like growing chicks, should be exposed to the direct rays of the sun at frequent intervals. This enables them to utilize the lime in the ration, through the action of the ultra-violet rays of the sunshine. It is not enough that the birds be exposed to sunlight coming through ordinary window glass because the glass filters out the ultra-violet rays and the desired effects are not secured.

Vitamin D in the ration also enables the birds to assimilate lime and phosphorus. If for any reason the birds can not be given the benefit of the unobstructed sunshine, supply vitamin D by feeding cod liver oil. Give each 100 hens about one-fourth pound of the oil daily, mixing this with scratch grain and feeding in troughs.

HENS which are excessively fat frequently lay soft-shelled eggs because of a soft degeneration of the egg organs which prevents their doing their work effectively. In such cases one must so feed the birds as to get rid of the surplus fat. Very limited amounts of scratch grain, dry mash only, green feed in abundance.

Extreme forcing of layers may also cause soft shelled eggs because the eggs come so fast that the hen does not have time enough to make firm shells. In such cases reduce the amount of protein in the ration, feed less mash and more grain, feed plenty of green stuff and give occasional dose of Epsom salts.

Occasionally we find an individual bird that persistently lays soft shells. This is due to some malformation or disorder of the egg-producing organs and such birds should be sent to the block.

EGG eating, as previously intimated, commonly develops in flocks that produce any considerable number of eggs having soft shells. One or more birds eat the broken eggs, acquire a taste for them and then learn to break eggs having normal shells. It often happens that only a few individuals acquire the habit, but they will destroy a high proportion of the eggs produced by that particular flock. The culprits can usually be identified by smears of yolk on their bills and heads.

This bad habit, too, is most commonly found in flocks which are very closely confined. Birds on free range seldom acquire it to any great extent.

IF the vice of egg eating has developed in a flock, one should try to identify the offending individuals and separate them from the other layers. Carefully trim the bills of the confirmed egg eaters, paring off thin layers until "the quick" is exposed at the point. This is extremely sensitive and the bird so treated will scarcely break eggs having firm shells. By the time the beak is renewed the habit is often forgotten.

See to it that all the nests are so arranged as to prevent the breaking of eggs with consequent spread of the vice. The nest boxes should be roomy and have low fronts which permit the birds to step in instead of forcing them to jump down. The nests, too, should be well cushioned with a liberal supply of hay, straw or shavings. Darkening the nests, facing them to the wall, leaving a narrow space through which the hens may enter, or by hanging some strips of burlap over the open fronts will also reduce loss from this habit.

IF necessary, collect the eggs at frequent intervals. Remove all the traces of broken eggs. Never permit eggs to remain on the floor or flapping boards. And by all means supply plenty of drinking water as thirst may cause the vice to be acquired.

"Dummy eggs" often serve to cure the egg eaters. These are prepared by removing contents of the shell, packing the shell with bread crumbs saturating these with ammonia. These "loaded shells" should then be placed where the egg eaters can attack them and a mouthful or two will usually make the offenders develop a sudden dislike for eggs in general.

The really important thing is to produce eggs having firm shells. This can be done by observing the suggestions given above. (Copyright.)

Finds Tomb of Ancient People

Explorer Stumbles on Bones of Baskets Weavers in New Mexico.

Carlsbad, N. M.—Jim White, explorer and discoverer of the famous Carlsbad cave, has just found a cave burial tomb of the Basket Maker race, 4,000 years old, in the Guadalupe mountains along the New Mexico-Texas boundary. Several human skeletons and numerous artifacts were revealed.

So remote in time is the Basket Maker that the ancient cliff dweller, existing as long ago as the dawn of the Christian Era, is comparatively a newcomer. Pottery making, which had reached perfection 20 centuries ago, had not even come into existence in the Southwest during the Basket Maker period. Since the vanishing of the early people other races, hony with antiquity, have come and gone in this region.

Mr. White, until recently head guide in the Carlsbad cave, a monument to his prowess as a pioneer, had resigned his position with the national park service. Looking for other vast caves he might again call his home, he sighted a black speck on a canyon wall 20 miles away.

This speck grew as he plodded across the wind-swept desert, strewn with bones of vast cattle herds perished in the drought. At last the objective loomed in the form of a half-moon shaped cave mouth 400 feet above the canyon bed.

Rude Burial Case Found.

The cave turned out to be not one of the huge fairylands distinguishing these mountains, but a dusty nook, the abiding place of the dead.

In the dim cave light Mr. White discerned upon the floor fragments of cactus cordage common to the basket maker. With no other tool than a pound coffee can he began to scoop away the knee-deep layer of dust that has accumulated during the long centuries.

The excavation was made along the base of the cave wall, for these ancients buried their dead seldom in the center of a chamber, but close beside the wall.

Beneath the dust a layer of flat stones came to view; these removed, a rude burial case made of sotol stalks and twigs bound together was found. Inside was a heavy packing of tule, a species of bulrush.

This stripped away, next came a fiber mortuary rough made of the pulpy trunk of the Spanish bayonet, and a grave. Finally, a human skeleton with knees drawn to chin.

Then, one after another, this cave tomb gave up three more skeletons.

It appears that these ancient people were not far removed from the Oriental in point of use of artifacts. Split bamboo matting in three sizes was found. This wild bamboo was once prolific along the Rio Pecos, but is now extinct. Two other weaves of mat were discovered. These were made of split blades belonging to the sotol, a cactus palm indigenous to this foothill region.

Also, five types of netting were uncovered, the meshes ranging in size from three inches square, down to a tiny opening through which a dime barely could be passed. The large heavy nets were used to snare game.

As a mortuary offering, the pelvis bone and skin of a small deer were unwrapped from the large netting. Too, it appears that smaller weaves were employed for the trapping of birds. In this burial were counted feathers of three bird species.

Tortoise Was a Symbol.

The tortoise seems to have had some significance with these people of the dim ages. Offerings of tortoise were observed.

String from the size of a thread to that of small trunk rope was unearthed. Both the netting and the cordage for the most part are woven from the fiber of the Spanish bayonet and the "weeping bear grass," a species of yucca. They appear to be as strong as the day upon which they were placed away. Extreme dryness of the climate holds time down to almost a stop during the centuries.

The strangest specimen of cordage, however, is that made of human hair—black, coarse, faded to a reddish cast.

Musicians Again Play in the Cafes of Vienna

Vienna, Austria.—Thanks to the advent of the sound film, music such as that which in prewar days made the Vienna cafes famous is again to be heard in these establishments. Thrown out of work by the conversion of most of the city's movies into "talkie emporiums" the small Vienna orchestras are only too happy to provide entertainment in the various coffee houses in return for the small tips.

 London.—Those who have experienced the difficulty of finding the alarm clock in a dark room after it has started ringing, will appreciate the latest alarm from Schwarzwald, the home of the cuckoo clock. When the alarm goes off, a light on the clock's face is automatically turned on, making it much easier to find the elusive alarm.

ANCIENT GUELPH TREASURE TO BE SCATTERED ABROAD

Wonderful Medieval Collection to Be Offered to Museums and Collectors.

London.—It now seems likely that Germany is to have not much more than a farewell glimpse of the historic Guelph treasure which the former reigning duke of Brunswick sold last January to a syndicate of Frankfurt art dealers. The syndicate has lately announced that this wonderful collection of medieval silver is to be exhibited in Frankfurt and Berlin as soon as it has been catalogued and valued, but that eventually it is to be offered to museums and private collectors throughout the world instead of only to German museums.

It has been known since the summer of 1923 that the ex- duke was proposing to raise money by selling part of his famous collection, but it has always been assumed that, whatever happened, the collection would not be allowed to pass out of German possession. The ex- duke's family, the once powerful House of Hanover, had been a princely German house for something like 12 centuries, and some of the most valuable and irreplaceable treasures of German medieval art form part of the patrimony which before the war made it one of the wealthiest reigning families in Europe.

Some time after the duke's abdication in 1918 the treasure, or rather that part of it which has now been sold, was removed from the palace at Gmunden and conveyed to the cantonal town of Aarau, midway between Zurich and Basle, in Switzerland, where it was deposited in the vaults of a bank whose name has been kept secret.

Until the cataloguing has been completed and its results announced, it is impossible to say in more than the most general terms what part of the treasure has been taken away to Aarau and sold. There are said to be 82 objects at Aarau, of which the best known is the reliquary in gold, ivory and enamel which was brought back from the Crusades by Duke Henry the Lion, one of the most important of the Brunswick line of the Guelphs.

The whole treasure consists of hundreds of pieces wrought, chased and carved by the finest goldsmiths and silversmiths of Germany, France and England, all of it said to have a total weight of something like four tons. Ranging in date from 1360 down to 1850, its first inventory was made in 1842. The larger part of it, the ecclesiastical collection, is still safe in Vienna, but the secular collection, having now been sold to dealers, seems to be on the eve of unknown wanderings.

ANOTHER WOMAN TRAINED HER SON

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

MARIA STEBBINS hadn't had good health since her son, Tom, got married. Tom hadn't married to suit her. She had always expected him to take Emma Page, a nice, sensible girl, with money. Maria had done her best to help on the match. Just as she thought she had the matter cut and dried Tom gave her the slip and married Dolly Archer's daughter, Dawn.

Dawn! The very name made Maria wriggle uncomfortably like an angle-worm fast to a fishhook. She had not seen Dawn since she was grown up; she didn't want to see her. Didn't she know Dawn's mother? That was enough for her.

Maria didn't go to the wedding. She sent a chest of silver to the bride; then she was through, all through.

That was three months ago. Tom had not been near her since. He had written, but what was a letter? Once he had suggested bringing Dawn to see Maria, but Maria had nipped that in the bud. If they'd let her alone she'd let them alone. Fortunately, they lived so far apart that it wasn't particularly easy to get back and forth.

One morning Maria was feeling unusually bitter and blue. She sat on the front porch trying to darn stockings, but her hands shook so she couldn't thread her needle. "My hands shake like leaves, Ella," she told Mrs. Beach, who paused in passing. "Just look at 'em!" She held them up for Mrs. Beach to see. They did shake, and they had always been so steady and firm.

"You're worrying your head off, Maria," Mrs. Beach said. "Worry killed a cat. It'll get you if you don't look out. Best thing for you to do is to make up with Tom and his new wife."

Maria sniffed. She wanted to throw the stocking basket at Mrs. Beach. The idea! Telling her to make up with Dolly Archer's daughter! Her lips set in a tight line. Mrs. Beach saw that she was angry and moved on.

Tom hadn't used her right, Maria thought, as a big, hot rolled down her cheek. She needed him. Hadn't she always let him have his own way in everything? If he ever wanted anything she always gave him a little bit more than he asked. And now she was lonely and bereft.

A blue coupe drove up and stopped before the house. Out of it stepped a woman, young, sprightly, smartly clad. From her close-fitting dark hat to her four-inch heels she was complete. Maria stared through her glasses. She snorted. For this was Dawn's mother! This was that impossible Dolly Archer!

"How-do, Maria?" Dolly mounted the steps. "Haven't seen you in a hundred years. Thought it was about time we two mothers-in-law got together."

Maria, frozen in her rocking chair with a stocking drawn over her hand, was speechless. Dolly sank down into the porch hammock, opened her vanity case and proceeded to freshen up her small, piquant face.

"I didn't ask you to come here," Maria exploded at last. "You needn't expect me to make you welcome, after the way you maneuvered to get my boy married to that girl of yours. If you expect to make peace you're just as much mistaken as if you'd lost—your hat."

"I see you're the same old rock of stubbornness, Maria," Dolly chuckled. "You're certainly refreshing in a changeful world—you are, really. And I love the way you speak your mind. So few folks do that nowadays. Look here, Maria, if you're still grouchy at me for getting Hud Archer away from you when we were girls you can just cut it out. He was no joy as a husband. He didn't leave me a cent either. Hence the tearoom. That's how Dawn got a decent education. She's a good girl. And she'll make something of that lazy, extravagant, thoughtless son of yours yet, see if she doesn't!"

Maria was down sick after Dolly went away. By afternoon she was a case, as she expressed it to herself. She went to bed and took several different kinds of pills, and felt worse all the time. Maybe when she was dead Tom would come and look at her and realize what he had done.

Evening came. The house grew dark and still. What was that? A step, the back door opening, somebody whistling "Mother Machree." She knew now she was out of her head. It couldn't be Tom in reality.

"Mom! Where are you?" A real voice; the old question. She answered. Tom came to the bedroom door. "What are you doing in here," he demanded. He switched on a light. "Why, Mom! You're sick!"

"You've got a temperature, Mom," he said, laying his cool hand on her hot forehead. "Have you lain here all day?" She nodded. "Been alone?" She nodded. "Not a bite to eat?" She shook her head.

Tom arose and went into the kitchen. In an incredibly short space of time he re-entered the bedroom bearing a tray, on which were arranged temptingly a slice of toast, browned just right, a pot of tea, a poached egg, half a sugared orange.

It was amazing. She had always waited on Tom hand and foot, and here was Tom waiting on her. He fed her until she had cleared the tray.

"Close as a closet in here," he commented. "I'm going to take you out on the porch where it's cooler." He simply picked her up in his arms and bore her, tralling the blue bed blanket, out to the porch hammock. "You don't weight within twenty pounds what Dawn does," he remarked.

Sitting on the edge of the hammock, her hand in his, he talked to her. Maria's astonishment and curiosity grew. This tender, gentle, sympathetic man was not the wild, selfish, thoughtless boy she had raised. What had happened to him?

"You—you're happy, Tom?" she asked.

"Happy! It's Eden, paradise, heaven all in one, being married to Dawn."

Silence. Then a sigh, "You've changed a lot, Tom."

"For the better. Sure I have. Dawn was pretty well discouraged with me at first. I had to make a quick change; our matrimonial bark was going on the rocks. Dawn's a hard worker and a straight thinker. She can't stand folks who aren't the same. She's all for owning a home, having a family, paying as we go." He felt in his pocket. "Habit," he muttered. "I've given up smoking. Dawn puts the money in the savings bank."

Maria looked at her son. He had never looked finer. A big, healthy, virile fellow. Dawn must be all right. And Dolly Archer had trained Dawn. Well, she must be all right, too. Maria hated to admit it. Must be something fine deep down in Dolly after all. Maria had turned out a pretty doubtful product, but Dawn had taken it and finished it and given it value. Dawn hadn't had any inheritance of that kind from Hud Archer. But from Dolly, nery little Dolly, who was making a tearoom pay; she must have got a big endowment. Maria hated to feel that Dolly was a better woman than she, but wasn't there evidence of it right here and now in Tom? Judged by all the standards of motherhood Dolly had Maria beaten forty ways.

"I'd like to see Dawn," she murmured.

Tom jumped up. "Sure. She's waiting down the street a ways, sitting in the car. I'll go and get her. You see, Mom," Tom added, laughing. "I wasn't sure you'd want to see us both."

Oatmeal All Right, but Not With Codliver Oil

Cablegrams from London tell of a dour fight put up by Scots in the house of commons against a British government medical research report showing that oatmeal, the Highlanders' national dish, promoted decay of the teeth. The Scots were as indignant at reflections against oatmeal as they were when the doctors suggested abolition of the kilt because it leaves too much draft on the knees.

Tom Johnson, undersecretary for Scotland, declared at the turbulent parliamentary session that the investigation had not branded oatmeal as necessarily deleterious except that it increased the body's requirement for vitamin D. So it was seriously suggested that the Scots take codliver oil along with the oatmeal. We all know codliver oil is not a fascinating diet, but its chief objection to the Scots might be its expense.

Oatmeal as a popular dish is not confined to Scotland. Americans like it for breakfast and are large consumers of all kinds of cereals. It is commonly asserted there is very little nourishment in cereals, and they wouldn't be of much use if they were not accompanied by milk. If that is true and milk is the real nourishment of a cereal breakfast dish, then there might not be such great need for vitamin D.

We freely admit the matter is too deep for us, and are willing to leave its settlement to the angry Scots and the physician champions of vitamin D. But most Americans who love their oatmeal will join the Scots in bucking on codliver oil as an accompaniment.—Elkhart Truth.

The Screw in History

The screw is in reality an inclined plane wrapped around a cylinder. The principle of the screw was known to Archimedes as early as 250 B. C. It was used by the Romans of the empire in their wine and oil presses and was probably familiar to many Mediterranean peoples at the beginning of the Christian era. It is one of the most extensively used of the elementary mechanisms. Until early in the Nineteenth century screws were roughly made by hand and imperfect tools. The thread and neck were formed by the use of hand dies and backsaws. In 1836 as a result of an American invention, machines began to be used.

Preserving a Gibbet

Included in a list of some 200 monuments which have been granted state protection by England is the platform of an ancient gibbet at Piece hall, Halifax. Piece hall, also to be preserved by the government, is the one remaining monument to the early days of the cloth industry in Halifax. Although there is no exact date known for the erection of the gibbet at Piece hall, it was used in England long before the Nineteenth century.

One-Man Sawmill
 Making it possible for the farmer to operate his own sawmill without employing other help, a one-man sawmill now is available to turn into profit much of the timber that formerly was used for firewood or wasted entirely. The mill is so arranged that all the levers to manipulate it are within easy reach of the operator and, aside from sawing out standard size lumber, will also cut shingles, lath and railroad ties. Stationary or portable mills may be obtained and both are operated by stationary engines, electric motors, water power, or by a belt from a truck.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Always use best oil—say expert mechanics

When you consider how much you paid for your sewing machine, vacuum cleaner, lawn mower, washer, and other expensive devices, don't you think it's foolish to try to economize on oil? The very best costs only a few cents a year—and is really cheapest in the long run.

3-in-One, a scientific blend of mineral, vegetable and animal oils, is made especially for lubrication of household devices. It cleans and protects as well as lubricates. 3-in-One costs more to make than ordinary oil but it costs less to use. If you know what expert mechanics know about oil, you'd never use anything else around the house. At good drug, grocery, hardware, department and general stores, in 15c and 80c bottles and cans. For your protection, look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.

MIDGET OF ROAD IS MADE COLLAPSIBLE

A woman rider starting out in a portable collapsible cycle car with a three-speed gear and a front brake, a recent innovation in London, the popularity of which is increased by the fact that it is taxless.

LOUIS MEYER TO HAVE SWIFT CAR

Machine Will Have Rear-Wheel Drive and Be Driven by Spur Gear.

There has been a good deal of gossip concerning the car Louis Meyer will drive in the 1930 Indianapolis 500-mile race, but the actual facts were not disclosed until a few days ago when Alden Sampson, head of the Sampson-Meyer-Brett racing combination came into Indianapolis to arrange for quarters where the car will be built.

The car will be named the Sampson Special. Its 16-cylinder motor will be made up of two banks of eight cylinders. The car, a rear-wheel drive, will be driven by a spur gear off the rear end of a separate crankshaft for each of the banks. The cylinders will be of 2 1/2/16 bore by 3-inch stroke and the motor will have displacement of 201 cubic inches.

Conforms to Specifications. Otherwise the car will conform to all the specifications of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway corporation for the 1930 race, which will start this year at 10 o'clock a. m. on May 30, as usual.

"The three of us worked for weeks on the design and the motor blocks have already been made and machine work on them is about finished," Sampson said. "Riley Brett is coming on from the coast and from then on we will go at top speed to finish the car."

Asked who would be the riding mechanic with Meyer, Sampson said he did not know. There will be a thousand requests pour into the workshop without doubt, but Sampson intimated that he considered the mechanic's seat highly important and that he might ride with Louis in the first race for two-man cars since 1922 on the greatest automobile race course in the world.

Sampson is the most picturesque figure in racing in America. He was an automobile dealer in Ohio two years ago when he met Louis Meyer. They both were men of few words, of about the same height and general build. Louis was a mechanic for Frank Elliott. Two weeks before the 1928 race Louis wired his friend in Ohio that he had a good buy in a race car if Alden had the money. Alden had it and came to Indianapolis, where the car was bought. So did Louis justify the investment that he won first place that year. The same year Sampson bought a car from the Frank Lockhart estate and Meyer drove it into second place in the 1929 race.

Work of Trio Divided. The work of this winning trio is well divided. Sampson watches the money end. Louis Meyer does the driving, and does it so well that he won the A. A. A. driving championship in 1928 and 1929; Brett who has worked on more winners than any other racing car specialist, has the responsibility of seeing that the car is always in tip-top shape mechanically. This rare combination has made a trio to conjure with where seconds mean thousands of dollars.

The public will be much interested to see how the 16-cylinder car—the first one of its kind for track in America—will perform. With its background it can almost be written for a place well up at the finish.

Exhaust Clears Fog in Front of an Automobile

Hot air sprayed out in front of an automobile by an attachment on the exhaust of the car has been found effective in clearing away London's time-honored fog, the American Automobile association reports.

The rising current of heated air created by the device, a recent invention, literally lifts the fog about ten feet in front of the front wheels and does it quickly enough to permit a forward speed of about fifteen miles an hour in the densest fog.

The fog lifter can be attached to any car's exhaust and is much simpler than the average windshield wiper. It has been tried out in London and is being adopted by motorists there.

THE MOTOR QUIZ (How Many Can You Answer?)

- Q. What portion of the motor vehicles of the world were registered in the United States? Ans. Approximately 76 per cent.
- Q. How many persons are employed in the motor car and allied industries in the United States? Ans. One in about every 26 persons.
- Q. How many American made motor vehicles were sold outside of the United States last year? Ans. 1,015,000.
- Q. How many motor vehicles were imported in 1929? Ans. 710.

Effective Motor Cut-Out Is Easily Constructed

An easily built and effective motor cut-out can be constructed from an old tin can and a few discarded parts, as shown in Fig. 3. Remove the exhaust pipe and cut a large hole in it. Cut holes in the ends of the tin can so that it will slip over the pipe. Fit one bolt as a stop and another for the spring that pulls the can back over the hole when the valve stem on the end of the cord is allowed to slide into the hole in the dash. The hole in the exhaust pipe can be cut most easily by sawing a V-shaped notch in the pipe with a hack saw. Notch area should equal pipe cross section.—Popular Science Magazine.

Watch Motor Car Brakes During Severe Weather

Most any brake adjustment will work reasonably well in warm dry weather, when roads are dry and everything works freely; but much greater care must be exercised in winter, when roads are slippery and brake bands and joints are covered with mud and ice. Have the brakes looked after frequently to be sure that they take hold evenly and the movable joints should be frequently oiled with thin penetrating oil and if possible covered to prevent mud and ice from freezing on them and locking them.

In driving, one should use the brakes very cautiously, as a sudden application of the brakes is almost sure to cause a skid, and even a slow pressure may produce the same results if the brakes are badly off in adjustment.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

If the car has a backing light, reverse never should be used as a brake when the car is left parked. It drains the battery.

Another part the motorist must remember not to tighten too much is the water pump shaft-packing gland. The shaft must run free.

"The shoe manufacturers say we do not walk enough." This is important, we think. Whereabouts downtown do the shoe manufacturers park their cars?

Beginners are apt to overchoke the engine when starting. It is often unnecessary to use the choke at all, especially in warm weather or shortly after you have been running the car.

Motorists long have been warned not to touch the head of the speedometer and not even to let the average mechanic work on it. Speedometers are delicate instruments, like fine watches.

100,000 OF GERMAN SOLDIERS MISSING

Many of Them Buried in Nameless Graves.

Berlin.—Eleven years after the war, 100,000 German soldiers are still missing.

Most of them are believed to lie in mass graves in foreign soil, dumped there by the enemy and no record kept of their identity. But a healthy percentage, 10,000 perhaps, are believed to be alive and to have remained "somewhere in Siberia," disclaimed upon liberation to go back home to a shrewish wife or to face financial or other difficulties, says the Chicago Tribune.

Of these 10,000, many undoubtedly live in bigamous bliss, married to a Russian girl who may or may not have been informed about the fraud back home in Germany.

43,251 Were Prisoners. Of the hundred thousand missing, 43,251 were last heard of as prisoners of the French. What happened to them beyond that is not known. By far the greater part probably died in French army hospitals or on their way there, in the opinion of the German Reich association of former war prisoners, which has just issued a report on the situation. They were likely buried in mass graves and no adequate effort made to keep any record of their identity.

A greater number, 51,213, were last heard of as prisoners of the Russians. Most of these are assumed to have died in the epidemics that swept the badly managed Siberian prison camps from time to time. The number of dead probably made it difficult for the not too efficient Russian hospital and burial services to keep tabs on identification.

To this day the association is kept busy disposing of rumors as to what happened to Germany's hundred thousand missing. Sometimes the rumors are investigated. Sometimes they are absurd on their face and without investigation receive immediate and emphatic denial. Of the latter variety is the rumor which persists in springing up now and then in Germany that the French and Russians maintain secret prison camps where German soldiers are still being confined.

Canard Branded. Another rumor goes to the effect that France forced thousands of German prisoners to join her foreign legion in North Africa. The German Former Prisoners' association brands that one as a canard manufactured for the purpose of maintaining hatred between Germany and France.

The story was probably suggested by the fact that about 60 German prisoners at the end of the war chose to join the foreign legion rather than be repatriated to the fatherland. It is also true that many of these had pasts that were not unclouded and preferred not to go back home.

Other German missing are scattered about the world, buried in the soil of the far flung battlefields where they fought and fell. The former German colonies in China, Africa, the Balkans, Italy, Turkey, and the seven seas—the latter holding the hundreds of Germans who went to sea in U-boats and who never came back—all these figures in the list.

Finally, there are those Germans confined in Siberian prison camps who when set free chose to stay. One Berlin daily, the Zwoelf Uhr Blatt, estimates the number at a good 10,000 and remarks that 10,000 German mothers or wives still have a chance to see their long lost soldier men alive.

West Virginia's "Gretna Green" Sets New Record

Wellsburg, W. Va.—This "Gretna Green" for elopers of the tri-state district achieved a new record in 1929, 3,360 couples having secured their licenses from the bureau here. Even the record cold day of the year—the Saturday following Thanksgiving day—when the frigid blasts seemed unbearable, 17 young, hopeful couples made their appearance and secured the necessary permits to wed.

Chinese Have Hundreds of Monetary Systems

Shanghai.—There are hundreds of different monetary systems in China. Almost every small settlement and city has its own system and when a person from one village wants to buy something in another he must make a number of complicated calculations before he knows what he must pay.

Woman's Back Talk Costs 60 Days More

Washington.—Back talk to the judge, telling him where to go, cost Miss Dorothy M. Davis, twenty-four, a sentence of sixty days in jail on top of thirty already decreed her by Police Judge Hitt here.

Judge Hitt did not hear the remark, but his attention was called to it and he thereupon notified a brother magistrate who held over the young woman suspended sentences in two dry cases.

The original thirty days had been given after conviction of tapping a gas main.

WIDOW OF BANDIT NOW REVIVALIST

Husband Electrocuted, She Turns to Evangelism.

Philadelphia.—Mrs. Gertrude Doris, widow of Frankie Doris, noted Olney bank bandit who was electrocuted in the state prison at Rockview with three companions for the murder of Policeman Harry M. Cooper in 1926, has become a revivalist. She is attached to the Salvation Army citadel, Eighth and Vine streets, where she is devoting her life to alleviating the sorrows of others.

Commandant Stainthorpe said that Mrs. Doris had been regularly enrolled as a "Soldier of the Lord," and was assigned to the district centering around Eighth and Vine streets. Her probationary period over, she has assumed the Salvationists' uniform.

Recently she appealed to those who entered the citadel to forego the ways of sin. Standing on the platform the young woman avows "the racket" can never pay.

"Crime doesn't pay. There's nothing in the racket, in any racket. It's a losing game," she exhorted her hearers. "Some who lose go to the chair, the others, in the long run, go to jail. And the women, their fate is even worse; you have seen them pass on their way to the Philadelphia General hospital; then oblivion."

The widow of the bank bandit, who has admitted she was once a racketeer, left the old ways on the night after her husband, with Francis Bentley, William Juliano and William Curry, attempted to rob the Olney Bank and Trust company, and were captured after Policeman Cooper had been shot down.

She obtained work in a department store and early last fall began to attend the Salvation army meetings. A few months ago she had a long talk with Commandant Stainthorpe and began her period of probation for service with the Salvationists.

New Cuban Highway to Open New Tourist Route

Havana.—La Carretera Central, or Central highway, now under construction throughout the island, is rapidly nearing completion and it is expected that by early spring most of the provinces will be linked together by this great paved highway.

While it was first estimated that the highway would cost $74,000,000, the total cost when completed will be $95,000,000. Approximately $30,000,000 of the $80,000,000 recently negotiated by the Cuban government through the Chase National bank in the form of 5 1/2 per cent bonds will be used to complete payment for construction of the highway.

Under the present schedule of construction 8,254 people are employed by the Warren Brothers company of Boston and the Compania Cubana de Constratastas in actual construction work. Havana province is complete, with Pinar del Rio 78.30 per cent completed and Matanzas 70.20 per cent completed.

The increased number of American automobile tourists noted in the Havana province this year is largely attributed to the Central highway, which when completed, will attract even more visitors who heretofore have barely left the city limits of Havana and know very little of the rest of this fertile island.

Prefers Cell, After 27 Years, to Paris Freedom

Paris.—"I am a meditative sort of person, Judge. Please give me the maximum prison sentence."

So, after 27 years in prison, Nicolas Billois was returned to prison for 10 years more. Nicolas, a stocky, clean-shaven, gray-haired, mild-mannered Frenchman, prefers prison life to modern French civilization.

Billois originally was sentenced to 27 years in prison. He protested bitterly when his long term was shortened because of his exemplary conduct and that he was once again a free man.

He left the prison and a few days later was arrested for setting fire to an airplane hangar. Billois confessed he set fire to the hangar because he wished to return to prison.

"I am a philosophical meditator," he said, "and I enjoy thinking a great deal in my prison cell. I set fire to that hangar because I got tired of going about in this so-called civilized world. Please give me the maximum sentence for my crime."

He got it.

Old Edict Brings Furore

Dijon, France.—An edict of 1777 raised its dusty head to bring to justice a man who unluckily threw a dead rabbit into the river at Dijon. The edict was promulgated in 1777 by the states council of Louis XVI, which got hot with rage because dead rabbits were occasionally thrown into French rivers. When a man at Dijon was caught throwing a rabbit into the river he was arrested and heavily fined on the strength of this edict.

Novel Peace Plan

Philadelphia.—A modern "Garden of Eden" comprising 1,000 acres to serve as a symbol of peace and good will among men and as a monument to the century of peace between the United States and Canada, may be built in the Great Lakes region, if plans promulgated by the Philadelphia branch of the National Association of Gardeners materialize.

TELLS HOW 'SHOW ME' STATE GOT ITS NAME

Lack of Dress Suit Led to Catch Phrase.

Columbia, Mo.—Those who use the "show me" quotation probably never paused to wonder how that catch phrase, which has made the state of Missouri famous and which has been repeated countless times in many lands, originated. So popular has the phrase become that it is now used as a state slogan, a title for the newest humor publication at the Missouri university, and is carried in the banner of the state National Guard.

Col. Willard D. Vandiver, a Virginian by birth, but a Missourian at heart, is accredited for this bit of often used original humor. Thirty-one years ago Colonel Vandiver was a member of a naval committee inspecting the naval yard at Philadelphia. After the inspection, the naval committee was invited to stay for a banquet given that evening by the Five o'clock club of the city.

Had No Dress Suit.

"I had no idea of attending a banquet," said Colonel Vandiver, "so I forgot to bring along my dress suit, and so did Governor Hull of Iowa, who was a member of the military committee. We were the only ones who did not have dress suits, so we planned to go to the banquet without them."

"But when I arrived later I found Hull had rented one, and that I was the only one who was not prepared for the occasion. During the toasts, Governor Hull was called upon and he eulogized Philadelphia, even declaring that the tailors there had made him a dress suit on only 15 minutes notice."

"I was called on next, and didn't know whether to crawl on top of the table or under it. I finally decided to make my speech the meanest one possible."

It Didn't Fit Him.

Colonel Vandiver abused the city roundly and then turned on Hull to repay him for the embarrassment he had caused him, ending his speech with these words: "His talk about your hospitality is all bunk; he wants another feed. He tells you that the tailors, finding that he was without a dress suit, made him one on 15 minutes notice. You heard him say that he came here without one, and you see him now with one that doesn't fit him. That is the reason you see him with one and me without one. I came from a state that raises corn, cockle-burs, and Democrats; I am from Missouri. You've got to show me!"

Colonel Vandiver did not know at that time he had nicknamed a state and had spoken what was to be a world famous slogan.

America Leads in Child Study, Expert Claims

Denver.—America is more than 20 years ahead of Europe in its application of child psychology, according to Justin Briery of Columbia university, expert on child psychology. Briery visited his home here recently after making a study of conditions in orphanages, day nurseries, and institutions for dependent children in foreign countries.

Briery's report, which will be submitted to Columbia university, the League of Nations, and the child labor bureau of America, included studies made in various institutions in England, Germany, France, Sweden, Italy, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales.

While mental or psychology tests are applied to the subnormal child in many institutions in Europe, Briery said that no mental or emotional tests were given to normal children.

"Such tests are common in our public schools," he said. "We have long considered the emotional and the mental test absolutely necessary for the welfare of the normal child. In Europe the opinion is just the opposite."

He said he found only two psychological clinics in London and that they were on a trial basis, compared with hundreds in America.

Lack of finances was his explanation of this slow progress.

Virtually all the countries of Europe have established juvenile courts, patterned after the one Judge Ben Lindsey first established in Denver, Briery said.

Expectant Dads Find Champion in This Man

St. Louis.—A whimsical volume which makes a plea for "expectant fathers" is being published here.

New and revolutionary plans for the father's comfort during the period when the stork is expected are dealt with in "Expectant Fathers—Their Care and Treatment," by Douglas Vass Martin, Jr., St. Louis author.

Correct diets and exercises are prescribed and an outline for a new type of hospital—the paternity hospital—where fathers may have recreation and entertainment while waiting for the announcement, is suggested by the author.

The volume is dedicated to fathers the world over, "those patient, suffering heroes, scorned by doctors, humiliated by head nurses, but destined to pay the bills for the babies."

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated. Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime?
