ly first assigned it, from 1609 to 1622, a cotemporary congregations of French and German Protestants) of St. Catharine Gasthuis on the Brede straat near the in 1622 to 1644, they gave to its service the Jerusalem on the Celle-broeder's gracht, a few minutes walk of the University; and from 1644 to 1805, the room of which these memorials of the dead had their and comely edifice had been erected, here on the ny years before as a chapel for the use of an order of their name (from a black plaid, or scarf, which they called Faliede Bagyn." About 1595—some twenty years after the University—this building was taken possession a floor was run through it so as to divide it into two portion was appropriated to the University library, half of the lower story was fitted up for a combined lecture-room of anatomy; while the front half was used school. In 1644, this front half was suitably arranged to the uses of a chapel for this Scottish church, which till Mr. Mitchell's retirement, and the death of the—a period of 161 years. A short time after this last of the building (including the tower) was pulled down a larger scale, to accommodate the anatomical museum; and still more recently—the improvements being in the summer of 1865—the whole structure has been the now really fine and valuable library, of say 70,000 MSS., including in the latter some of the rarest of these funeral monuments range from 1680 to 1739. the period of the occupation of the room as a place an English congregation, under the State patronage, which they commemorate become natural, as the seat of Englishmen dying while connected with the University resident as exiles, or for commercial purposes, in were at the same time members of this congregation.

words in regard to three of these persons, so sepulchral (No. 1), commemorates James, Earl of Loudon, who persecuted in Scotland under prelacy, chose Leyden as an exile, and died there—as a memorial tablet which was to the wall of the chapel testifies—"xxix Octobris, an (No. 3) was the fifth pastor of the church (from and the fact that the inscription, with the date of his family, makes it probable that some, at least, of which were traceable beyond the number indicated by of his lineage.

in memory of Edward Paige (No. 2)—the name attracted my attention to these memorials—must, of us blundered in the date of birth (1622), either by the original cutting, or by the copyist. Capt. Nicolas is not, I think, traceable in this country before Edward Lane, the first husband of Anne Keayne, husband Nicolas became, must have been living here late as 1663, and Benjamin Keayne, Anne's father, did not marry till 1639. So that the date, 20 Feb. 1622, is impossible as the date of Edward's birth. It is a curious fact, however, that Edward and Anna Lane had a son Edward, born (according to Savage) 20 Feb., 1662. Is it not reasonable to suppose that this Edward Lane changed his name to Edward Paige, after his mother married Capt. Nicolas, and that the inscription in Leyden was placed over his body, and should read 1662, instead of 1622? It seems to me more probable that Edward Lane—of whose time and place of death and burial I have seen no record—is thus accounted for, than that his mother had a second Edward, on the same day of the same month of another year, by her second husband.

JUDGES OF PROBATE

[Communicate]

I HAVE collected some information which will furnish at some future time out in the meantime, information.

1. JAMES RUSSELL, of C
2. JOHN LEVERETT, of graduated at Harvard
3. FRANCIS FOXCROFT, continued in office, with proclamation of Governor magistracy November
4. JONATHAN REMINGTON re-appointed July 3, in 1696.
5. SAMUEL DANFORTH, re-appointed Nov. 20
6. JOHN WINTHROP, of C uated at Harvard in
7. OLIVER PRESCOTT,<sup>2</sup> September 1, 1779 the State, re-appointed 1750.
8. JAMES PRESCOTT, of C at Harvard in 1788.
9. SAMUEL P. P. FAY, O at Harvard in 1798.
10. WILLIAM A. RICHARD pointed Judge of Probate and Insolvent consolidating the office vency," which went i at Harvard in 1843.

In Mr. Washburn's Judicial History of Massachusetts, it is stated that at Harvard in 1712, is referred to as a Judge. This must be an error, as Judge Prescott's entering college, and his discharge on account of his "advanced age" was about thirty-two years of age in 1712.

Upon the death of Judge Washburn, the year, proceeded to ballot for a successor. He was fourteen, "the greater part of the only case of balloting which has been recorded in the history of the State." It is probable that upon any of the records in the present seems to have been held after the death of OLIVER PRESCOTT's name. Prescott on the council's records, 1781, when, upon the adoption of a new constitution, the office of the governor and all civil officers of the government were abolished, and the office previously since September 1780. There is a hiatus in the record.

8 Births, Marriages and Deaths in Portsmouth, N.H. [January,

"That we deem it cause of grateful acknowledgment to the Author of all Good, that the society and the state have, through so long a series of years, been favored by his earnest and indefatigable spirit of inquiry into the sources of our history, and by proofs of his diligence, skill, and success in developing and recording, greatly for the common good, the results of his varied studies regarding the general history and bibliography of the state, the lives of prominent citizens and professional men, and especially the history of his own town and city, so full of details of interest and importance: manifold labors continued almost to the day of his death;

"That, by such an eminent example of patient continuance in an important work, we are encouraged to renew our diligence in promoting, each in his measure, the valuable objects and pursuits to which our honored friend devoted, so generously, his time and labor."
